

Phi. No, my noble Lord, it is not for you. I haue heard
It ouer, and it is nothing, nothing in the world;
Vnlesse you can finde sport in their intents,
Extreamely stretch, and cond with cruell paine,
To doe you seruice.

Thes. I will heare that play. For neuer any thing
Can be amisse, when simplenesse and duty tender it.
Goe bring them in, and take your places, Ladies.

Hip. I loue not to see wretchednesse orecharged;
And duty in his seruice perishing.

Thes. Why gentle sweet, you shall see no such thing.

Hip. He saies, they can doe nothing in this kinde.

Thes. The kinder we, to giue them thanks for nothing
Our sport shall be, to take what they mistake;
And what poore duty cannot doe, noble respect
Takes it in might, not merit.

Where I haue come, great Clearkes haue purposed
To grette me with premeditated welcomes;
Where I haue seene them shiner and looke pale,
Make periods in the midst of sentences,
Throttle their practiz'd accent in their feares,
And in conclusion, dumbly haue broke off,
Not paying me a welcome. Trust me sweete,
Out of this silence yet, I pickt a welcome:
And in the modesty of fearefull duty,
I read as much, as from the ratling tongue
Of fauery and audacious eloquence.

Loue therefore, and tongue-ride simplicity,
In least, speake most, to my capacity.

Egeus. So please your Grace, the Prologue is addrest.

Duke. Let him approach.

Flor. Trum.

Enter the Prologue. Quince.

Pro. If we offend, it is with our good will.
That you should thinke, we come not to offend,
But with good will. To shew our simple skill,
That is the true beginning of our end.
Consider then, we come but in despight.
We do not come, as minding to content you,
Our true intent is. All for your delight,
We are not heere. That you should here repent you,
The Actors are at hand; and by their show,
You shall know all, that you are like to know.

Thes. This fellow doth not stand vpon points.

Lys. He hath rid his Prologue, like a rough Colt: he knowes not the stop. A good morall my Lord. It is not enough to speake, but to speake true.

Hip. Indeed hee hath plaid on his Prologue, like a childe on a Recorder, a sound, but not in gouernment.

Thes. His speech was like a tangled chaine: nothing impaired, but all disordered. Who is next?

Tawnyer with a Trumpet before them.

Enter Pyramus and Thisby, Wall, Moone-shine, and Lyon.

Pro. Gentles, perchance you wonder at this show,
But wonder on, till truth make all things plaine.
This man is Pyramus, if you would know;
This beauteous Lady, Thisby is certaine.
This man, with lyme and rough-cast, doth present
Wall, that vile wall, which did these louers sunder:
And through walls chinke (poor foules) they are content
To whisper. At the which, let no man wonder.
This man, with Lanthorne, dog, and bush of thorne,
Presenteth moone-shine. For if you will know,
By moone-shine did these Louers thinke no scorne
To meet at Ninnes tombe, there, there to wooe:

This grizy beast (which Lyon hight by name)
The trusty Thisby, comming first by night,
Did scarre away, or rather did affright:
And as she fled, her mantle she did fall;
Which Lyon vile with bloody mouth did staine.
Anon comes Pyramus, sweet youth and tall,
And findes his Thisbies Mantle staine;
Whereat, with blade, with bloody blamefull blade,
He brauely broacht his boiling bloody breast,
And Thisby, carrying in Mulberry shade,
His dagger drew, and died. For all the rest,
Let Lyon, Moone-shine, Wall, and Louers twaine,
At large discourse, while here they doe remaine.

Exit all but Wall.

Thes. I wonder if the Lion be to speake.

Deme. No wonder, my Lord: one Lion may, when many Asses doe.

Exit Lyon, Thisby, and Moone-shine.

Wall. In this same Interlude, it doth befall,
That I, one Shewt (by name) present a wall:
And such a wall, as I would haue you thinke,
That had in it a crannied hole or chinke:
Through which the Louers, Pyramus and Thisby
Did whisper often, very secretly.
This loame, this rough-cast, and this stone doth shew,
That I am that same Wall; the truth is so.
And this the cranny is, right and sinister,
Through which the fearefull Louers are to whisper.

Thes. Would you desire Lime and Haire to speake better?

Deme. It is the vvitteiest partition, that euer I heard discourse, my Lord.

Thes. Pyramus drawes neere the Wall, silence.

Enter Pyramus.

Pir. O grim lookt night, O night with hue so blacke,
On night, which euer art, when day is not:
On night, O night, alacke, alacke, alacke,
I feare my Thisbies promise is forgot.

And thou O vvall, thou sweet and louely vvall,
That stands betwene her fathers ground and mine,
Thou vvall, O vvall, O sweet and louely vvall,
Shew me thy chinke, to blinke through vwith mine eie.
Thankes courteous vvall. Ioue shield thee vwell for this,
But vwhat see I? No Thisby doe I see.

O vicked vvall, through vvhom I see no blisse,
Curst be thy stones for thus deceiuing mee.

Thes. The vvall me-thinkes being sensible, should curse againe.

Pir. No in truth fir, he should not. Deceiuing me,
Is Thisbies cue; she is to enter, and I am to spy
Her through the vvall. You shall see it vwill fall.

Enter Thisby.

Pat as I told you; yonder she comes,
This. O vvall, full often hast thou heard my mones,
For parting my faire Pyramus, and me.
My cherry lips haue often kist thy stones;
Thy stones vwith Lime and Haire knit vp in thee.

Pir. I see a voyce; now vwill I to the chinke,
To spy and I can heare my Thisbies face. Thisby?

This. My Loue thou art, my Loue I thinke.

Pir. Thinke vwhat thou vilt, I am thy Louers grace,
And like Limander am I trusty fill.

This. And like Helen till the Fates me kill.

Pir. Not Shafalus to Procrus, was so true.

This. As Shafalus to Procrus, I to you.

Pir. O

Pir. O kisse me through the hole of this vile wall.
This. I kisse the wals hole, not your lips at all.
Pir. Wilt thou at Ninnes tombe meete me straight way?

This. Tide life, tide death, I come without delay.
Wall. Thus haue I Wall, my part discharged so;
And being done, thus Wall away doth go. Exit Clow.

Du. Now is the morall downe betwene the two Neighbors.

Deme. No remedie my Lord, when Wals are so wil-full, to heare without vvarning.

Dur. This is the silliest stuffe that ere I heard.

Du. The best in this kind are but shadowes, and the worke are no worke, if imagination amend them.

Dur. It must be your imagination then, & not theirs.

Duke. If wee imagine no worke of them then they of themselves, they may passe for excellent men. Here com two noble beasts, in a man and a Lion.

Enter Lyon and Moone-shine.

Lyon. You Ladies, you (whose gentle harts do feare
The smallest monstrous mouse that creepes on floore)
May now perchance, both quake and tremble heere,
When Lion rough in wildest rage death roare.
Then know that I, one Sung the toyner am
A Lion fell, nor else no Lions dam:
For if I should as Lion come in strife
Into this place, twere pittie of my life.

Du. A verie gentle beast, and of a good conscience.

Deme. The verie best at a beast, my Lord, yere I saw.

Lys. This Lion is a verie Fox for his valor.

Du. True, and a Goose for his discretion.

Deme. Not so my Lord: for his valor, cannot carrie his discretion, and the Fox carries the Goose.

Du. His discretion I am sure cannot carrie his valor:

for the Goose carries not the Fox. It is well; leaue it to his discretion, and let vs hearken to the Moone.

Moone. This Lanthorne doth the horned Moone present.

Du. He should haue worne the hornes on his head.

Du. Hee is no crescent, and his hornes are inuisible, within the circumference.

Moone. This lanthorne doth the horned Moone present: My selfe, the man, the Moone doth seeme to be.

Du. This is the greatest error of all the rest; the man should be put into the Lanthorne. How is it els the man with Moone?

Deme. He dares not come there for the candle.

Dur. For you see, it is already in snuffe.

Dur. I am vwearie of this Moone; vwould he would change.

Du. It appeares by his smal light of discretion, that he is in the wane: but yet in courtlesie, in all reason, vve must stay the time.

Lys. Proceed Moone.

Moone. All that I haue to say, is to tell you, that the Lanthorne is the Moone; I, the man in the Moone; this thorne bush, my thorne bush; and this dog, my dog.

Deme. Why all these should be in the Lanthorne: for they are in the Moone. But silence, heere comes Thisby.

Enter Thisby.

This. This is old Ninnes tombe: where is my loue?

Lyon. Oh.

The Lion roares, Thisby runs off.

Deme. Well roard Lion.

Du. Well run Thisby.
Dur. Well shone Moone.
Truly the Moone shines with
Du. Wel mouz'd Lion.
Deme. And then came Pir.
Lys. And so the Lion va

Enter P

Pir. Sweet Moone, I thank
I thanke thee Moone, for sh
For by thy gracious, golden
I trust to taste of truest Thisb
But stay: O spight! but mar
What dreadful dole is heere
Eyes do you see! How can i
O dainty Ducke: O Deere!
Thy mantle good; what stai
Approch you Furies fell:
O Fates! come, come: Cut t
Quaile, crush, conclude, and

Du. This passion, and the
Would go neere to make a m

Dur. Beshrew my heart,

Pir. O wherefore Nature

Since Lion vilde hath heere d
Which is: no, no, which was
That liu'd, that lou'd, that lik
Come teares, confound: O
The pap of Pyramus:
I, that left pap, where heart d
Thus dye I, thus, thus, thus.

Now am I dead, now am I fle
Tongue lose thy light, Moone
Now dye, dye, dye, dye, dye.

Deme. No Dye, but an ace

Lys. Lesse then an ace ma thing.

Du. With the helpe of a St
uer, and proue an Assie.

Dur. How chance Moone

Thisby comes backe, and find

Enter Th

Duke. She wil finde him by

Heere she comes, and her pass

Dur. Me thinks shee shou such a Pyramus: I hope she w

Deme. A Moth wil turne the which Thisby is the better.

Lys. She hath spyed him alre

Deme. And thus she meane

This. Asleepe my Loue? V

O Pyramus arise:

Speake, Speake. Quite dumbe

Must couer thy sweet eyes.

Thes. Lilly Lips, this cherry n

These yellow Cowslip checkes

Are gone, are gone: Louers m

His eyes were greene as Leeks

O sisters three, come, come to

With hands as pale as Milke,

Lay them in gore, since you ha

With theeres, his thred of silke

Tongue not a word: Come tru

Come blade, my brest imbrue:

O